Osage Nation Museum asks for community engagement
during upcoming exhibit:
*Enduring Images: Osage Photographic Portraiture

Pawhuska, Okla. (1/8/2017) – The Osage Nation Museum (ONM) will host an Opening Reception for Enduring Images: Osage Photographic Portraiture on Thursday, February 23rd from 4-6pm.

This exhibit is comprised of late 19th and early 20th century portrait photographs from the ONM's permanent collection. Also included in the exhibit is the recent donation of over 1,000 photographs from Assistant Chief Raymond W. Red Corn.

The museum is seeking help from community members in identifying the people and places in the photographs of our recent acquisition. The ONM will have photo binders available for patrons to look at and add any additional information they may know about the individuals and/or places in the photographs from Assistant Chief's recent donation. In doing so, the ONM hopes to capture important information that will enhance the photographic collection housed here.

Curator, Hallie Winter said "Often times, it only takes one generation for knowledge to be lost. To ensure the stories and information related to these photographs are preserved for all future generations, the museum is relying on our community to add information to our collection and actively contribute to the cultural preservation of our heritage."

Enduring Images: Osage Photographic Portraiture will run thru August 26th, 2017.

Reception hours are 4:00-6:00pm

Light Refreshments will be served.
